

BAILEY TALKS TO THE SENATE

TEXAS SENATOR EXPLAINS HIS ATTITUDE ON HIDES, LUMBER AND IRON ORE REG-ULATIONS.

SPEECH WAS LENGTHY ONE

Senator Beveridge of Indiana also gives his views on regulation of tobacco packages.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—In a long speech in the senate today Senator Bailey of Texas made reply to those who have been criticizing him for his position in favor of a duty on hides, lumber and iron ore and other articles of raw material in connection with the pending tariff bill. His expression on the subject of hides is a fair example of what he said with reference to the other articles involved.

Mr. Bailey's speech was in the main devoted to an effort to show that free raw material was not a cardinal democratic doctrine and that he had never advocated such doctrine. He was willing to admit that "during the time when Mr. Cleveland and his friends dominated our party, they did commit it to the supreme folly of giving our manufacturers free trade in what they buy while leaving them protection on what they sell." He had, however, in common and out of common denounced this as a radical departure from the well established principles and policies of the democratic faith.

After citing many authorities he traced the advocacy of free raw material to the late Hon. Abram S. Hewitt of New York, but declared that this doctrine had never commanded any substantial support among the leaders or with the rank and file of that sturdy democracy which won so many victories and administered this government with such consummate wisdom through so many years.

Referring them to the position of Hon. Roger Q. Mills of his own state, Mr. Bailey pointed out that as far back as 1866 he, Mr. Bailey, had taken a position against free raw material. He said that in 1900 he had canvassed his state everywhere denouncing "this fallacy" and that he had been elected to the senate on that issue among others.

Concluding Mr. Bailey expressed confidence that the time would come when, with a democratic majority in the senate, he would be called upon to aid in passing a democratic tariff bill, and he said he did not desire to then be upbraided for nothing.

He said he was a vote against the principles of the old-time democracy. "At this time I stand, and with them I am ready to be judged, declaring as I have always done, and as I shall do with my latest breath, that the sum of all good governments is comprehended in the maxim that all shall enjoy equal rights, and none shall have special privileges."

When my course is run there may be many who will think that I have not fought a good fight, but there shall be none who can justly say that I have not kept the faith."

Beveridge's Talk

Senator Beveridge also addressed the senate at length today in support of his amendment changing the size of tobacco packages, in force since the Spanish-American war tax was levied. By repealing the tax, without increasing the size, the Senator claimed the American tobacco company has been the recipient of many millions of dollars it should not have received.

Back on the Stage And Asked
His Advice.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, June 24.—Proceedings in the Gould separation suit were started off today by the counsel for plaintiff by a reading of Dustin Farnum, the actor.

Mr. Farnum deposed in August, 1905, that he took luncheon at the St. Regis hotel with Mrs. Gould upon her invitation.

"I went there on a matter of business as Mrs. Gould was thinking of going back on the stage and wished to talk it over with me," the witness said.

He continued: "We had lunch in the parlor of Mrs. Gould's apartments. I stayed about an hour and a half. Mr. Gould was to have been there, but came in just as I was leaving."

Mrs. Gould took the stand this afternoon in rebuttal and gave most interesting testimony.

Iowa Lawyers Hold Fifteenth Annual Gathering—Illinois Bar Members in Session.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Marshalltown, Ia., June 24.—Seventy hundred Iowa lawyers were present this morning at the opening of the fifteenth annual meeting of the State Bar association. The sessions were held in the district court room. Rev. M. H. Smith of Marshalltown pronounced the invocation and Judge J. M. Barker delivered the address of welcome. Hazen L. Sawyer responded. A paper was read by Prof. H. Claude Hornum on "Tendencies in Legal Education." The transaction of routine business occupied the remainder of the forenoon.

The following program of toasts has been arranged for the annual banquet at the Elgin hotel tonight: "In Days of Old," C. H. E. Boardman, Marshalltown; "The Bar, the Courts and the State," Gov. B. P. Carroll; "Iowa, the Best of All," Judge W. S. Keyton, Ft. Dodge; "1909, Lincoln Centennial," E. E. Pavilio, United States attorney of the northern district of Iowa; "The Truth About Our Judges," E. M. Shuman, Davenport; "The Truth About Our Lawyers," Justice W. D. Evans of the Iowa supreme court.

The sessions of the meeting will be concluded tomorrow. The principal features of the program will be the annual address, which will be delivered by Prof. John H. Wigmore, and consideration of the report of the committee on law reform.

Peoria, Ill., June 24.—A large and representative attendance marked the thirty-third annual meeting of the Illinois Bar association, which opened here today. Lawyers from all sections of Illinois are present. The annual address of President E. P. Williams of Alton opened the meeting.

The association will remain in session over tomorrow. One feature awaited interest by the members is the action to be taken on a proposed code of ethics, which is designed to bring about a reform of the entire legal practice and procedure of the state, on "Employers' Liability," Hiram T. Gilbert of Chicago will discuss the subject of "The Administration of Justice in Illinois," and O. H. Dean of Kansas City will speak on "The Making of the Constitution."

AGRICULTURISTS OF THE SOUTH CONFER

Cotton and Wheat Planters of Southern States Discuss Marketing
Of the Crop of 1909.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Atlanta, Ga., June 24.—Results important and far-reaching in their character are expected to follow the conference of farmers and planters which began in this city today under the auspices of the Farmers' Union—an organization which has added a million members to its roster within less than a decade.

The marketing of the 1909 cotton and wheat crops in the chief topic to be discussed by the conference, the sessions of which will last four or five days. For several years the Farmers' Union has been actively engaged in bringing about a closer cooperation among cotton planters for their mutual benefit. The elimination of the middleman and the prevention of cotton exchange speculation have been the objects sought. Recently the same movement has been extended to the wheat farmers and with the same ends in view.

GOLFERS MEET FOR OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

Amateurs and Professionals On Links
At Englewood, N. J. Try For National Title.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, June 24.—Once a year the professional and amateur golfers meet on equal terms for the national title of "open champion." This year's tournament opened today on the links of the Englewood Golf Club, at Englewood, N. J., under conditions that promise a successful meeting. The entry list, however, is hardly up to the high standard reached in some previous years.

The tournament is given an international favor by the entry of Tom Vardon, the well known English professional golf player. He is a brother of the famous Harry Vardon, who won the national open championship on the links of the Chicago Golf Club in 1907.

New Rochelle, N. Y. Presents Descendant Of Lord Pell With Fatted Calf, As According To Ancient Contract.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 24.—A unique and amusing ceremony was witnessed today by a large crowd of New Rochelle citizens gathered at the Grand Manor House, which is the residence of George H. Pell. The event of the day, and the occasion for the ceremonies and festivities, was the presentation of a fatted calf to Mr. Pell on behalf of the City of New Rochelle. Mr. Pell received the gift with dignified courtesy befitting a direct descendant of Lord Pell, who was the original owner of New Rochelle, and thanked the mayor and other city officials who made the presentation.

The presentation of the fatted calf to Mr. Pell marked the revival of an old custom. When Lord Pell sold the town area now comprising the city of New Rochelle to the Huguenots in 1688 for about $500 he thought that he had made such a good deal that he threw in another two acres for a church, on condition that the Huguenots would every year thereafter present to him on his birthday or anniversary on St. John's day one fatted calf. The Huguenots kept their word for many years, but finally allowed the custom to lapse. Recently at the unveiling of a Huguenot monument Mr. Pell and the mayor of New Rochelle and jokingly reminded him that the fatted calf had not been given for many years and that this year he would make a demand on the city for the calf. The mayor, who promptly decided to buy a calf and present it to Mr. Pell with appropriate ceremonies.

INSURANCE LAWS TO BE PRINTED

LAST LEGISLATURE DID NOT MAKE MANY CHANGES.

WHAT THE REGULATIONS ARE

Requirements Which Companies Are Forced to Comply with Will Be Made Known.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 24.—A compilation of the insurance laws of the state, including all enacted at the last session of the legislature, has been prepared in the insurance department and filed with the printer. It is expected that this will be ready for distribution by the end of next week. An examination of these laws shows much insurance legislation of importance was enacted. Some of the life insurance legislation of two years ago was repealed and only three slight amendments were made. These remove any possibility of dispute as to the construction which had already been placed on the laws by the department. A new law permits a company to write both participating and non-participating business provided it maintains a complete separation of all such business and files an agreement with the state that no part of the funds belonging to mutual policyholders shall be diverted from them excepting such as the existing charter or the policies provide for.

Policies Are Valued.

Perhaps the most important new law is the one relating to the valuation of policies, chapters 269 and 276. This provides for a valuation of every form of life, accident and health insurance and annuities, and gives to companies the fullest freedom in making their assumptions as to expected mortality and interest and the method of accumulating reserve within the limitations prescribed by these laws as safe and reasonable.

Another law, chapter 168, requires certain provisions in all policies. The first provision required is that the mortality table, interest rate and method on which the reserves are to be calculated are to be accumulated. The second provision requires the premiums for life and other insurance to be stated separately, making it impossible for companies and agents to confuse the insured and prevent fair comparison by adding provisions against sickness and accident.

The third provision requires that the policy grant automatically upon the failure to make any payment of premium, either a loan or extended or paid up insurance. A further provision requires that all such benefits shall be of the same value, thus doing away with the old practice of making very excessive charges for paid up or extended insurance allowed when a policyholder defaults in his payments.

Fire Insurance Laws.

A change has been made in the law relating to investments, by chapter 267, 1909, section 1903, permitting such companies to invest their capital and other funds in the bonds of public utilities.

The law relating to special interests to fire companies and their agents, chapter 159, section 1431, which prohibits rebating. This applies the same rule to fire insurance and also casualty insurance as has been applied to life insurance under the old anti-rebate law.

Another law, chapter 259, 1909, section 1215, requires a tax to be paid upon all insurance in unauthorized companies, the owner to pay the tax where the company does not. A number of the larger cities have been successful in collecting the fire department dues on this class of insurance, and it is believed that the state can be equally successful in collecting this tax, thus doing away with what is really at present a bonus to unauthorized companies in their insurance is written openly.

By chapter 290, section 219, the license fees of fire and marine companies were changed to two per cent on the basis of the gross premiums collected without other deductions than return premiums. The old law allowed a deduction of all losses and re-insurance and imposed a tax of four per cent upon the balance, the effect of which was to bring in about the same revenue as the new law and to impose a very heavy burden under the retaliatory laws on our domestic fire companies.

Insurance Generally.

A change of great interest to the policyholders is made by chapter 288, section 1202M, which does away with the harsh rule of the law of warranty as applied to insurance applications and policies, and substitutes the rule that an misrepresentation must have been material and increased the risk. It is probable that under the old law of mechanics were employed in a building sixteen days instead of fifteen as permitted by the policy, the insured had lost his right to the insurance money on a fire occurring possibly a year afterward. It was brought out in the argument on this bill that the supreme court of this state had held that a life insurance policy was void for a misstatement by the insured in the application; that he had not had a certain disease, even though he did not actually know it and it did not contribute to his death.

Must Have Surplus.

The largest single bill affecting insurance is chapter 499, 1909, which re-writes all the laws relating to the organization of insurance companies other than life companies and town mutuals. This law classifies insurance in the manner done by the re-provisions in Massachusetts. Now Jersey and Minnesota, and provides one uniform method for the incorporation of all insurance companies. It also provides an elastic manner of determining the maximum limit for the risk on any single hazard and determining the expense which may be permitted, and limits the minimum number of risks outstanding to 200. The bills repeals about 120 sections of the old insurance laws and covers the same ground more fully by creating 18 new sections. One change made requires all stock companies to have a surplus on organization of at least 25 per cent of the capital stock.

Change License System.

Another bill of interest to all companies is one which changes the method of issuing licenses to agents. Heretofore companies have been obliged to file applications with the commissioner and to have the licenses sent from Madison to the home office and then forwarded from the home office to the agent. This would involve a considerable delay and also considerable expense in the office of the commissioner. Under the new law blanks for licenses, containing a certificate that the company is licensed, are furnished direct to companies and are sent by the companies direct to the agents, a duplicate being at the same time sent to the department with the fee. The blanks contain stubs which are returned by the company. The stub duplicate and license are numbered and an account is kept with each company of all blanks furnished. The stub returned to the department is in such form that it can be used as a filing card so that the original records are at all times conveniently arranged in a card system and open to inspection.

CUNNINGHAM MAY BE DROPPED FROM BOARD

Civil Service Commission Member May Not Be Re-Appointed by the Governor.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 24.—There is every probability that T. J. Cunningham of Chippewa Falls, may not be re-appointed member of the board of civil service commissioners. His term of office expired on June 21.

There are two promising candidates for the position. One is Emil Wittzack of Fountain City. He is the editor of a German paper and is a man of considerable prominence. He has been complimented by a large number of letters from various parts of the state endorsing his candidacy. The second man whose name has been heard frequently in connection with the appointment is Prof. Helm of Horicon. It is probable that the appointment will be made within the next few days and that one of the two will be chosen.

Former Secretary of State Cunningham was chosen as the democratic member of the board at the time of the creation of the commission, four years ago. At that time Dr. Samuel Spaulding was chosen president of the board. With the expiration of his term of service two years ago, Gov. Davidson appointed Charles E. Huell of Madison to take his place. This is the second appointment that the governor has been called upon to make in connection with the merit board.

Members of the civil service board are appointed for a term of six years. They receive a salary of $10 a day, while on duty. As soon as the new member is appointed the board will be re-organized and it is practically certain that Otto Gaffron of Plymouth, whose term of office does not expire until 1911, will be chosen as president. Governor Davidson is expected to take action upon the Cunningham matter this week.

KICKERS' KOLUM.

To the Editor: There has been a new principle promulgated in regard to electric fans; it is simple but not

new. If the city or ward cannot pay for improvements, make the property owners do it. They have nothing to say and are absolutely powerless to prevent it. This point has been nicely illustrated lately by the plans of the council regarding Racine St. This street is rather unfortunately situated in regard to drainage. A small section only two blocks in length has to receive the surface water of not only a good share of the high ground lying east of the city but also much of that from the district about Riverview

Park. An immense volume of water pours down from the surrounding hills

during rain storms and to accommodate this the city engineer has recommended the building of large storm sewers to carry it off. But these would have to be built by the ward funds. But there are no ward funds available for the purpose. Why? Because the sewer alderman of the third ward, up for reelection this spring, estimated a very small budget of expense for the coming year to give an economical showing of ward funds under his management. Consequently the ward has no money except for its regular expenses. A bright idea is evolved: why not bid gutters and make the property owners pay for it?

Now the plan is to lower this long suffering and much flooded street, so that the surface drainage from Gas-field and Forest Park avenues and the high ground to the north may also be turned upon it. The latest scheme is to have the street paved and large brick gutters 4 feet wide built to carry off the surface water. Of course at the expense of the property owners. It is estimated that the extra expense will be $100 a lot.

What is the use of holding property, anyway, if you can't dispose of the water of your neighbor's hill? The two Third ward aldermen with their residences perched high upon the hills, to be drained, can see no harm in turning their flood water upon their neighbors' streets and making them pay for the disposal of it. It is probable that the matter if taken for a court of law would not stand for a moment, but they are counting on the passive acquiescence of the people on the street.

While most of the residents are anxious to have the street improved and are willing to pay for the same no other people are doing, they are not willing to have this extra expense of taking care of most of the flood water of the third ward placed upon them, and they think that the city or ward should in some manner pay this extra cost.

Most of the residences on Racine

St. are owned by working people to whom an extra tax is a hardship. One widow, though owning a small place, supports herself by washing. The sewer put in last year was paid for only by sacrifice and this much greater expense now contemplated may mean the absolute loss of homes to several. This calamity they are entirely powerless to prevent unless by appeal to law, and such, of course would be done only as a last resort.

ISSUES WARNING TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC

State Fire Marshal Purcell Issues Formal Statement to Observers of the Fourth.

To save the property of people of Wisconsin from possible damage by fire on Independence day, State Fire Marshal T. M. Purcell has issued a warning. He declares that all rubbish should be cleared away and the greatest care should be taken on the Fourth that fire is not communicated to buildings.

With the approach of the date on which we celebrate our national independence, I deem it advisable to again caution the public in the use of explosives and other fire producing devices, which have not only resulted in large property loss but have also caused a loss of many lives in the past," says Mr. Purcell. "Last year was the first in which this department existed and an effort was made at that time to arouse the public to a realization of the dangers on that day and to the exercise of caution, which might result in a saving.

Few Accidents Result
"This was done by issuing bulletins direct to the local fire chiefs and other authorities and was very generally supported throughout the state. The results were most satisfactory, as the small number of accidents both to lives and property throughout the state as compared with previous years was commented on generally. In a recent address before the National Board of Underwriters, at Washington, the following statement was made referring to the United States:—

"The large fire loss in this country as compared with other countries is due to the difference in the idea of thrift; in the view of responsibility of neighbors, and in the perception of the real meaning of fire loss or waste."

Should Enforce Rules
"This leads to the conclusion that not only should the local officers exercise vigilance in the enforcement of the state law and local ordinances, regulating sale and handling of ordinary joy producers but also all careful citizens should join the vigilance committee. In this way by clearing up alleys, removing rubbish prior to the fourth and by promptly reporting any violation of the legal regulations upon that day, I believe a still greater saving would result. The public should be made to realize that they are responsible not only for their own property but for that of their neighbors and that they are not to be allowed to celebrate to the extent of menacing surrounding property."

AGED MAN NARROWLY ESCAPES DROWNING

Frederick Schmidt, Aged Eighty-Seven Swept Over Montorey Dam In Boat Today.

Frederick Schmidt, aged eighty-seven, while paddling about on the river in a rowboat above the dam at Montorey this morning, was caught by the current and swept over the dam. The accident might have resulted seriously for the man had he not been aided by Otto Berger, who came to the rescue and pulled Mr. Schmidt out in time to save his life. In spite of his advanced years, Mr. Schmidt is still active, one of his chief pleasures being to row about in a skiff. In this pursuit he uses but one oar. It is supposed that he rowed too near the dam and was unable to control the craft with but the single paddle.

INDIANS GLAD OF CHANCE TO COME

Lac du Flambeau Redskins Would Be Glad to Make Janesville a Happy Hunting Ground on July 5.

The Lac du Flambeau Agency Indians are anxious to take part in Janesville's Independence Day celebration on July 5 and have instructed their representative to send word here to that effect. It will cost over $200 to bring them here, paying all expenses and a small compensation, but it is the belief of many of the committee that the feature would be well worth the price. The following letter came with the morning mail:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
United States Indian Service,
Lac du Flambeau Indian Agency,
Wisconsin,
June 22, 1909.

Geo. D. Simpson, Esq.,
Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir,
I am in receipt of a letter from William H. Appleby, with reference to having some bucks and squaws from this reservation attend your celebration on July 5, 1909, and stating that transportation would be furnished both ways, also subsistence and compensation, with the request that I communicate with you as soon as I was able to give you a definite answer. I would state that I have taken up the matter with the Indians, and I think about a dozen will respond to your invitation, and have desired me to say yes to you.

There will be some bucks, squaws and papooses, together with their paraphernalia. I think you will have to pay them $1.50 per day as they have received at other places, as well as their transportation and subsistence.

I think they should start Friday night, and surely not later than Saturday morning, providing you want them to come.

You can send transportation either to me or to the station agent, so that they will know what route they are to take.

Please let me know if you want them as early as you can.

Very respectfully,
W. J. EMMERT,
Government Farmer.

TENNIS MATCH WITH TEAM FROM EDGERTON POSTPONED

The tennis match between the Edgerton Business Men's club and a team picked from the Y. M. C. A. tennis players was postponed until a week from today on account of the recent rains having left the grounds in poor condition to play. However, the members of the Janesville team are hoping for fair weather between now and then that they may practice and secure a decisive victory over their opponents. A number of the enthusiastic fans have put in considerable practice since the season was first opened and are showing remarkably good form in their playing. Last year Edgerton was victorious over the Janesville team, although individual matches were captured by Janesville knights of the racquet. Janesville will this year try to blot this out by a crushing defeat for the Edgerton men. As an incentive for those from the Tobacco City is the recent victory of the basketball five which went from here to Edgerton and defeated them on their own floor. Quite a crowd is expected from Edgerton to witness the match.

TO ANNUL MARRIAGE OF BELDIT PARTIES

Action of Fred Woodward vs. Kate Woodward Was Tried in Circuit Court This Afternoon.

Before Judge Grimm in circuit court this afternoon was tried the action of Fred Woodward vs. Kate Woodward, brought by the plaintiff to have their marriage annulled on the grounds that the defendant was a party to the Klinsken vs. Klinsken divorce case less than a year before the nuptial knot in question was tied.

The case of Annie Johnston, et al. vs. Annie Astin, et al. was also taken up.

You Will Buy Sunny Southern Alberta Lands When You Know All Facts.

Briefly, I am going to give a few facts here:
27 farmers raised an average of 43.24 bu. of winter wheat per acre.
20 farmers raised an average of 40.31 bu. of spring wheat per acre.
119 farmers raised an average of 59.55 bu. of oats per acre.
44 farmers raised an average of 43.31 bu. of barley per acre.

These figures were obtained by the Provincial Government authorities who carefully inspected the threshers' books with a view of picking out a number of the large yields of this district.

Just a word about the land I am selling. I represent the Canadian Pacific Ry. Irrigation Colonization Department, and am offering their land at exceedingly low prices. The company owns the land and is making many inducements to settlers. It wants this country settled up quickly so as to get traffic for its railroad. It owns 2900 miles of irrigation canals so as to give water to crops when necessary. You buy the land on the

OLD COMMON SENSE

Change Food When You Feel Out of Sorts.

"A great deal depends upon yourself and the kind of food you eat," the wise old doctor said to a man who came to him sick with stomach trouble and sick headache once or twice a week, and who had been taking pills and different medicines for three or four years.

He was induced to stop eating any sort of fried food or meat for breakfast, and was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, leaving off all medicines. In a few days he began to get better, and now he has entirely recovered and writes that he is in better health than he had been before in twenty years. This man is 58 years old and says he feels "like a new man all the time."

"There's a Reason," Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," found in packs.

Uncle Sam Says Don't Eat Bleached Flour Bread

The U. S. Government, through its Expert Pure Food Department, has made a ruling that all flour bleached in direct violation of the National Pure Food Laws, and it has served a general notice that all flour now made after a bleaching process must conform to the Pure Food requirements (be unbleached) or it will not be permitted sold.

The bleaching process is done with peroxide of nitrogen. Thus a low grade and inferior wheat can be used and the difference is not discernible to the ordinary consumer. This practice cannot be construed otherwise than to deceive the public into buying an inferior baking flour.

MARVEL Flour is made, and always has been made, from the highest grade hard wheat, the most perfect grown. It is not bleached; or ever has been, and our mill does not have to alter its method of flour production to comply with the law. Why bake your bread from a flour which the Government says is made in violation of its Pure Food laws? Why not secure a pure and perfect flour, made from a high-grade wheat, milled after the most sanitary and health-giving mode of natural milling?

If you make your own bread, cake and pastry, demand of your grocer MARVEL Flour. If he cannot supply you send us his name and we'll see that he does. If you use baker's bread, ask for bread made from MARVEL Flour. It costs no more and is absolutely pure—of this you may be certain.

Listman Mill Company, La Crosse, Wisconsin

Our record for the purity of our MARVEL Flour is one to be proud of. We stand alone today as the only large mill in the U. S. that has never made a bleached flour.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

DO you want to know a very cheap way in which to buy some of a commodity that frequently comes very dear?

Do you want to know of a bargain purchasable from now to October right in the town or city where you live?

In short, do you want to buy some happiness at a marvellously reasonable rate?

In every city of the United States are many thousand children who will spend this summer playing on hot pavements and in filthy alleys, who are going to grow pale and wan by the tens of thousands and die by the thousands.

These strangely enough are the merchants who will sell you happiness at a bargain.

And this is the way you can buy it from them:

If you live in the country or at the sea shore, or even in a suburban town, and can somehow make room for two or three children for two or three weeks, or for a single kiddo for a single week, send to the city for some like-eyed, pale-cheeked baby, and the products you see in the contemplation of his joy you will find more happiness for yours self than you could buy for three times the sum it will cost you.

Now, isn't that a bargain?

Then listen.

If you live in the city, some afternoon or some Sunday invite the little bootblack that shows your shoes, and the boy that sells you your paper every morning and the pathetic little bundle girl that picked up your handkerchief for you so prettily one day—or if you have less of the spirit of adventure ask some home to loan you two or three forlorn little kiddies for a day—and take them with you on the most glorious picnic you can afford.

A prominent business man who has been tied to the city by the curse of a now and rapidly growing business, for three years past has taken his vacation by conducting one hundred children from an orphan asylum on the most gorgeous picnic money could buy. He says he gets more happiness in that one day than he ever got out of his week or two at some expensive summer resort in the years when he took his vacation straight instead of viciously. Last year I went with him. I never saw any happier children than those hundred, and yet, he was the happiest child of all.

Why not give your money straight out to some fresh-air fund instead of going to all that bother, you ask?

Because, in that case you wouldn't get that bargain supply of happiness, and then you wouldn't do it every year for the rest of your life as you probably will if you try my plan.

The real test is in the baking.

Other Baking Powders may make broad claims, but when it comes to the production of real delicious biscuits, cakes and pastry proves its real worth. This is because of its much greater leavening power and the strict purity of its ingredients.

It costs only a trifle more than the cheap and big can brands and much less than the Trust Baking Powders.

EVANSVILLE

Evansville, June 23.—Mrs. Emeline Smashall and son, Dr. Claude Smashall, went to Chicago this morning to attend the wedding of their son and daughter, Dr. Bert Smashall of Delavan. The marriage occurred at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. D. Q. Grubill went to Abingdon, Ill., today to visit Mr. Grubill's mother.

Miss Zettie Sleh, who had been re-elected as teacher of Latin and ancient history in the high school, had obtained permission to cancel her contract and has accepted a position in the high school of Racine, where her parents reside.

A very pleasant family reunion took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Johnson last Sunday. Those present were Dr. and Mrs. Garwood of Boulder, Colorado, Harry Johnson of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson and children of Union, and Bernice Johnson and family who came from Eagle, Wis., in their new automobile. Dr. and Mrs. Garwood and little daughter expect to leave for their home in Colorado the first of next week.

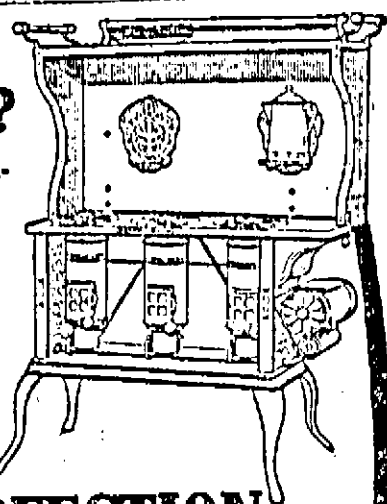

Miss Lillian Gibbs left Tuesday to spend the remainder of the week with relatives and friends in Rockford.

Mr. Joll of Chicago is a business visitor in this city.

The "Woe Folks" band will hold their annual picnic Thursday afternoon, July 1. At that time the officers for the ensuing year will be chosen.

What Stove for Summer?

Nothing adds to kitchen convenience in summer weather like a New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove. Anything that any stove can do the "New Perfection" will do, and do it better. Bakes, roasts, boils, toasts; heats the wash water and the sad iron and does it without dissipating its heat through the room to your discomfort. The

"For a time they laughed and chattered, pretending that the present held no cares or troubles, but soon the girl, nestling her head in a corner of the dingy cushions, was smiling ever more drowsily on Kirkwood. And presently she slept in good earnest, the warm blood ebbling and flowing beneath the exquisite texture of her cheeks, the ghost of an unconscious smile quivering about the sensitive scarlet mouth, the breeze through the open window at her side wafting at will in the sunlight witchery of her hair. And Kirkwood, worn with sleepless watching, dwelt in longing upon the dear, innocent allure of her until the ache in his heart had grown well nigh insupportable, then instinctively turned his gaze upward, searching his heart, reading the faith and desire of it, so that at length knowledge and understanding came to him of his weakness and strength and the clean love that he bore for her, and, gladdened, he sat dreaming in waking the same clear dreams that modeled her unconscious lips secretly for laughter and the joy of living.

When Dinkercroft halted their progress they were obliged to alight and change cars, Hobbs a discreetly sinister shadow at the end of the platform.

By schedule they were to arrive in Calais about the middle of the forenoon, with a wait of three hours to be bridged before the departure of the Dover packet. That would be an anxious time. The prospect of it rendered both Dorothy and Kirkwood doubly anxious throughout this final stage of their flight. In three hours anything could happen or be brought about. Neither could forget that it was quite within the bounds of possibility for Calender to be awaiting them in Calais. Presuming that Hobbs had been acute enough to guess their plans and advise his employer by telegraph, the latter could readily have anticipated their arrival, whether by sea in the brigantine or by land, taking the direct route via Brussels and Lille. If such proved to be the case it was scarcely sensible to count upon the arch adventurer contenting himself with a waiting role like Hobbs.

With such unhappy apprehensions for a stimulant, between them the man and the girl contrived a makeshift counter strategy, or it were more accurate to say that Kirkwood proposed it, while Dorothy rejected, disputed and at length accepted it, albeit with sad misgivings, for it involved a separation that might not prove temporary.

Together they could never escape the surveillance of Mr. Hobbs; parted he would be obliged to follow one or the other. The task of misleading the Alchemist's mate Kirkwood undertook, delegating to the girl the duty of occupying when he could provide her the opportunity of keeping under cover until the hour of sailing and then proceeding to England with the gladstone bag alone if Kirkwood was unable or thought it inadvisable to join her on the boat.

In furtherance of this design a majority of the girl's belongings were transferred from her traveling bag to Kirkwood's, the gladstone taking their place, and the young man provided her with voluminous instructions, a revolver which she did not know how to handle and declared she would never use for any consideration and enough money to pay for her accommodation at the Terminus hotel, near the pier, and for two passages to London. It was agreed that she should secure the steamer looking out Kirkwood's door until the last moment.

These arrangements concluded, the pair of blessed idiots sat steeped in melancholy silence, avoiding each other's eyes, until the train drew in at the Gare Centrale, Calais.

In profound silence, too, they left their compartment and passed through the station into the quiet, sun drenched streets of the seaport, Hobbs hovering solicitously in the offing.

Without comment or visible relief of mind they were aware that their fears had been without apparent foundation. They saw no sign of Calender, Stryker or Mulready. The circumstance, however, counted for nothing. One or all of the adventurers might arrive in Calais at any minute.

Momentarily more miserable as the time of parting drew nearer, dumb with unhappiness, they turned aside from the main thoroughfares of the city, leaving the business section, and gained the sleeper side streets bordered by the residences of the proletariat, where for blocks none but children were to be seen, and of them but few—quiet, sober little ladies playing almost noiselessly in their door-yards.

At length Kirkwood spoke. "Let's make it the corner," he said without looking at the girl. "It's a short block to the next street. You hurry to the Terminus and lock yourself in your room. Have the management book both passages. Don't run the risk of going to the pier yourself. I'll make things interesting for Mr. Hobbs and join you as soon as I can, if I can."

"You must," replied the girl. "I shan't go without you."

"But, Dorothy—Miss Calender!" he exclaimed, against.

"I don't care—I know I agreed," she declared calmly. "But I won't—I can't. Remember I shall wait for you."

"But—perhaps—"

"If you have to stay it will be because there's danger, won't it? And what would you think of me if I do sorted you there at 3:30, all you've done? Please, don't waste time arguing. Whether you come at 1 today, tomorrow or a week from tomorrow I shall be waiting. You may be sure. Goodby."

They had turned the corner, walking slowly side by side. Hobbs, for the first time caught off his guard, had dropped behind more than half a long block. But now Kirkwood's quick sidelong glance discovered the mate in the act of taking alarm and quickening his pace. None the less the American was at the time barely conscious of anything other than a wholly unexpected furtive presence of the girl's gloved fingers on his own.

"Goodby," she whispered. "He caught at her hand, protesting. 'Dorothy!'"

"Goodby," she repeated breathlessly, with a queer little catch in her voice. "God be with you, Philip, and—and send you safely back to me."

And she was running away.

CHAPTER XXVII.

DISFOUNDED with dismay, seeing in a flash how all his plans might be set at naught by Dorothy's unforeseen insubordination, Kirkwood took a step or two after her, but she was fleet of foot, and, remembering Hobbs, he halted.

By this time the mate, too, was running. Kirkwood could hear the heavy pounding of his clumsy feet. Already Dorothy had almost gained the farther corner. As she whisked round it with a flutter of skirts Kirkwood dodged hastily behind a gatepost. A thought later Hobbs appeared, head down, chest out, eyes straining for sight of his quarry, peering along for dear life.

As, rounding the corner, he stretched out in swifter stride Kirkwood was inspired to put a spoke in his wheel, and a foot thrust suddenly out from behind the gatepost accomplished his purpose with more success than he had dared anticipate. Stumbling, the mate plunged headlong, arms and legs asprawl, and the momentum of his pace, though checked, carried him along the sidewalk, face downward, a full yard ere he could stay himself.

Kirkwood stepped out of the gateway and snatched up as Hobbs picked himself up, something which he did rather slowly, as if in a daze, without comprehension of the cause of his misfortune. And for a moment he stood pulling his wits together and gazing as though on the point of resuming his rudely interrupted chase, when the noise of Kirkwood's heels brought him about face.

"Ow, it's you, eh?" he snarled in a temper as vicious as his countenance.

"Myself," admitted Kirkwood fairly, and then, in a gleam of humor, "Weren't you looking for me?"

His rage seemed to take the little cockney and shake him by the throat. He trembled from head to foot, his face shockingly congested, and spat out dust and fragments of lurid blasphemy like an infuriated cat.

Of a sudden "Where's the girl?" he spat out thickly as his quiet snorting eyes for the first time noted Dorothy's absence.

"Miss Calender has other business—none with you. I've taken the liberty of stopping you because I have a word or two."

"Ow, you 'ave, 'ave you? I've a word for you too! 'And over that bag—and look nippy or I'll make you ppe for 'vat you've done to me. I'll make you ppe!" he roared hoarsely, edging closer. "And it over or—"

"You've got another guess"—Kirkwood began, but saved his breath in deference to an imperative demand on him for instant defensive action, for a six inch blade of tarnished steel was winging toward Kirkwood's throat with the speed of light.

Instinctively he stepped back, as he instinctively he guarded with his right forearm, lifting the hand that held the scabbard. The knife, catching in his sleeve, scratched the arm beneath painfully and simultaneously was twisted from the mate's grasp, while in his surprise Kirkwood's grip on the bag handle relaxed. It was torn forcibly from his fingers just as he received a heavy blow on his chest from the mate's fist. He staggered back.

By the time he had recovered from the shock Hobbs was a score of feet away, the scabbard tucked under his arm, his body bent almost double, running like a jack rabbit. The Kirkwood could get under way in pursuit the mate had dodged out of sight round the corner. When the American caught sight of him again he was far down the block and bettering his pace with every jump.

He was approaching, also, some six or eight good citizens of Calais, men of the laboring class, at a guess. Their attention attracted by his frantic flight, they stopped to wonder. One or two moved as though to intercept him, and he doubled out into the middle of the street with the quickness of thought.

An instant later he shot around another corner and disappeared, the natives streaming after in hot chase, electrified by the inspiring strains of "Stop thief!" or its French equivalent.

The mob straggled round yet another corner and was gone. Its clamor diminished on the still spring air, and Kirkwood, recovering, abandoned Mr. Hobbs to the justice of the high gods and the French system of jurisprudence. At least he hoped the latter would take an interest in the case if hasty. Hobbs, aware, led by the heels and with his eye following. As for the scratch on his arm, it was nothing, as he presently demonstrated to his complete satisfaction in the seclusion of a chance sent there. Kirkwood, commending it to drive him to the American consulate, made his dignified en route, wound a handkerchief round the negligible wound, rolled down his sleeve and forgot it altogether in the joys of plotting to himself Hobbs in the act of opening the scabbard in expectation of finding therein the gladstone bag.

At the consulate door he paid off the driver and dismissed him. The fluster had served his purpose, and he could find his way to the Terminus hotel at infinitely less expense. He had a considerably harder task before him as he neared the steps to the consular doorway, knocked and made known the nature of his errand.

No malicious destiny could have timed the hour of his call more appositely. The consul was at home and at the disposal of his fellow citizens—within bounds.

In the course of thirty minutes or so Kirkwood emerged with dignity from the consulate, his face crimson to the hair, his soul smarting with shame and humiliation, and left an amused official representative of his country's government with the impression of having been entertained to the point of equal by an exceptionally clumsy but pertinacious liar.

He disappeared, the natives streaming after in hot chase.

At noon precisely, his suspense grown too onerous for his strength of will, throwing caution and his understanding to the winds, he walked boldly into the Terminus and inquired for Miss Calender.

When at length she appeared on the threshold of the apartment, bringing with her the traveling bag and looking wonderfully the better for her ninety minutes of complete repose and privacy, the relief he experienced was so intense that he remained transfixed in the middle of the floor, momentarily able neither to speak nor to move. Carlyle's Expressive Phrase. The phrase "unspeakable Turk" came into use in England during the Hungarian insurrection of 1870. It originated with Thomas Carlyle and made its appearance in a published letter of his, in which occurred the following sentence: "The unspeakable Turk should be immediately struck out of the question and the country left to honest European guidance."

FOOLISH QUESTIONS—No. 1,398.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive from the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as a sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that those distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. With your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.—take the advice received and be well.

MONEY-SAVING DAYS HERE

We have had a great season on ready-to-wear apparel. The business has surpassed our greatest expectations. On going through the stock, we find that we still own about 50 cloth suits.

But every garment in the store is a high grade, stylish production and worth its regular asking price.

The season's records have been established, profit making time is past. We want to say good by to the few good garments that remain. How can we do it? By cutting the price to a point where the shopper who attends says to herself—"Why, these are the greatest bargains I ever saw." That's the story in a nutshell. While they last (which won't be long) they will be the greatest bargains you ever saw. Come while the size assortment is good.
